- Note: When there is more than one "high" alert at once, the alerts are paginated. Then, when the user exits out of the first alert, the second appears and the user must exit out of that alert and so forth until they have seen each high alert. Outdated alerts should be downgraded to a low alert, and will not appear. There is also a dismiss all button the user can hit to immediately navigate to the homepage and bypass all alerts.

1 Note: This modal window will maintain a consistent width, and location from the top of the browser. The red line marks the fold. Content below the fold is hidden when the user initially navigated to the screen. Once the user scrolls down below the fold they can see this content. When the user tabs between notifications in the notification center at top, the height of the modal window scales according to the amount of content. However, the location of window remains fixed, so any change in the height of the window is hidden below the fold.
